

I found myself into doing the same repetitive tasks every time I needed to create a component . I had to create the directory and name the different files which seems like a lot of copying and pasting, using boilerplate code etc. so I decided to automate this process.

The script is a little more complex than my previous two scripts because it uses positional parameters. I have a lot of work to do improving this script because I'd like to be able to declare state variables and whether or not the inclusion of access to the Redux store is necessary. I have some code commented out for now just because it's easier to erase things than to have to type them out.

I see a lot of potential for this script to save me time over the long term as it evolves and I approve it.
